

10 / Six content pillars

What we keep talking about.

Six editorial territories. Enough range for the business, enough focus for the audience.

A content system with somewhere to go.

Places worth understanding

What is here, and why does the setting matter?

A place. Not a pin.

Subjects

Property, hospitality, aerial context, access and surroundings.

How to show it

Aerial + one grounded detail. Avoid unsupported distances and lifestyle promises.

Where it fits

Instagram discovery; Facebook project context.

How the work is made

What decision makes the image useful?

Why this route?

Subjects

FPV planning, shoot preparation, editing, sound and How To.

How to show it

Show source, decision and result. One technique per post.

Where it fits

TikTok demonstration; Instagram saveable carousel.

Experiences you can enter

What can a viewer explore for themselves?

Your next step is inside.

Subjects

Virtual tours, VR, navigation, hotspots and spatial storytelling.

How to show it

Screen recording first. Explain one interaction, then link the tour.

Where it fits

Facebook walkthrough; LinkedIn product explanation.

Projects with a point

What was the brief, and how did the work answer it?

One project. Three decisions.

Subjects

Case studies, progress updates, commercial teasers and deliverables.

How to show it

Brief → decision → evidence. Use measured results only when available.

Where it fits

LinkedIn case study; Instagram project sequence.

People behind the decisions

Who made the choice, and what did they learn?

Why this shot?

Subjects

Christobal Grego, collaborators, team, process and BTS.

How to show it

One real answer, one supporting frame. No invented quotations or credentials.

Where it fits

Founder LinkedIn post; conversational TikTok cut.

New ways to see

What does the technology help someone understand?

Real. Render. Label it.

Subjects

AI/innovation, render integration, interactive tools and creative-tech.

How to show it

Demonstrate a use case. Label captured, rendered and synthetic material.

Where it fits

LinkedIn explanation; Instagram visual comparison.

Choose the story before the format.

Start with an audience question, select the evidence, then choose the platform and format. A pillar is an editorial territory, not a color or template.

No rigid weekly checkerboard. Use these pillars to spot gaps over a month. Do not assign a permanent color to each one or post a founder quote every Tuesday just to satisfy a pattern. When a project has a meaningful update, let the update set the format.
