

05 / 15-post social grid concept

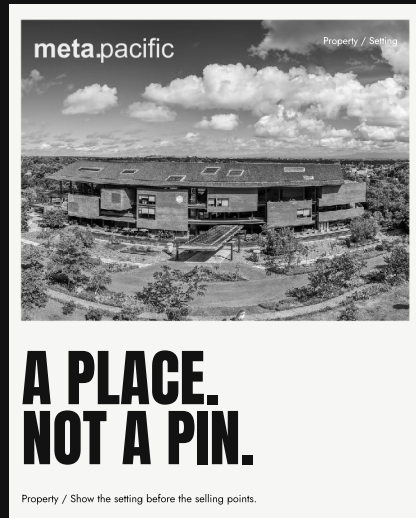

A rhythm, not a checkerboard.

Photography, ideas, people and proof. Each post has a job beyond filling a square.

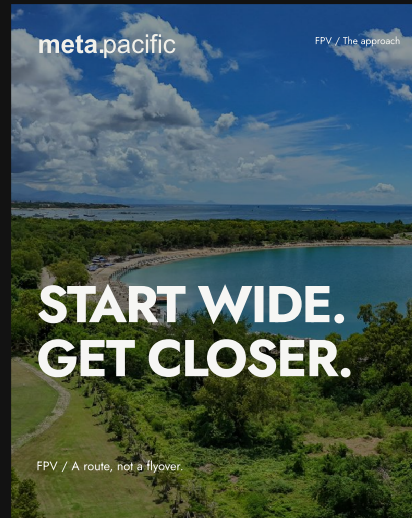

The whole sequence.

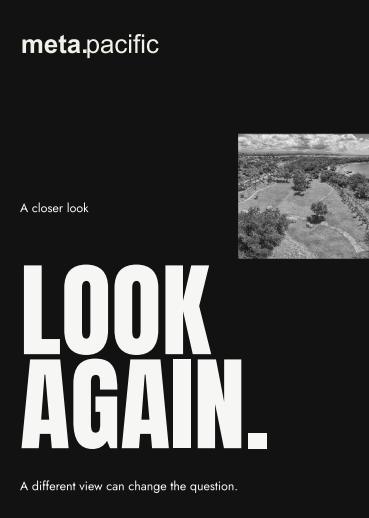

Fifteen posts. Five shifts in pace.

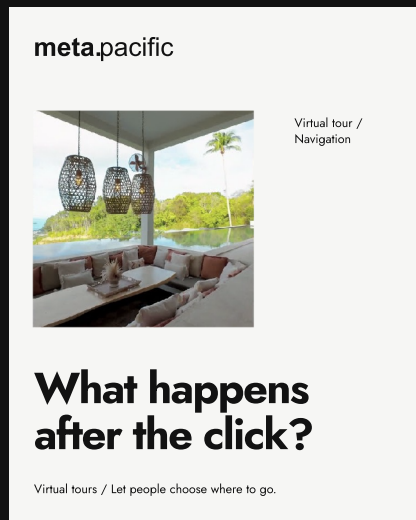

1. Places worth understanding

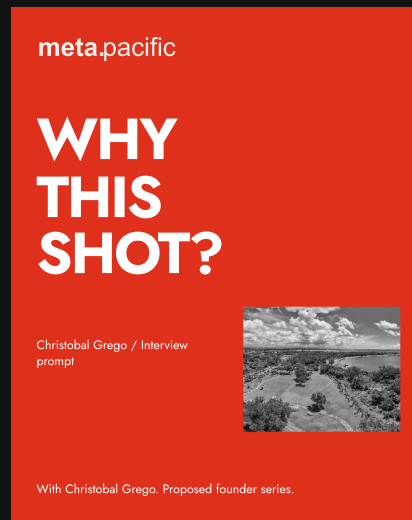

2. How the work is made

3. New ways to see

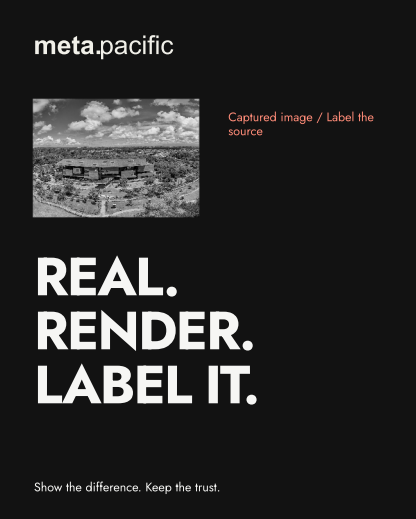

4. Experiences you can enter

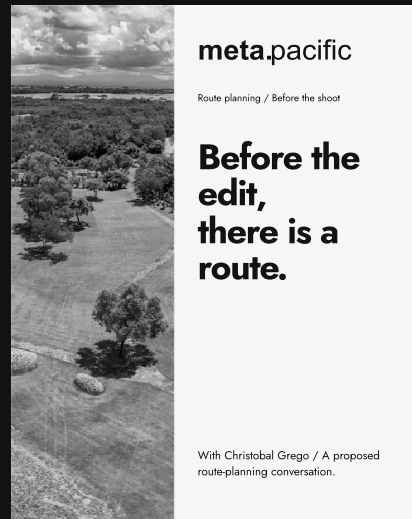

5. People behind the decisions

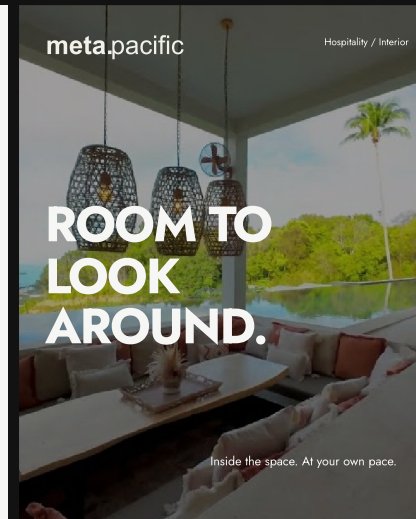

6. Places worth understanding

7. New ways to see

8. How the work is made

9. Experiences you can enter

meta.pacific

Case study / Brief, decision, image

One project.
Three decisions.

Brief. Approach. What changed.

10. Projects with a point

meta.pacific

Access / The way in

THE WAY IN.

Access is part of the place.

11. Places worth understanding

meta.pacific

360°

Virtual tour / Explore

LESS GUESSWORK.

From a flat image to a space you can explore.

12. New ways to see

meta.pacific

What did we leave out?

Editing / What stays out

A proposed question for Christobal and the team.

13. People behind the decisions

meta.pacific

A CUT
WITH A REASON.

How To / The edit

How To / Context, detail, then the next step.

14. How the work is made

meta.pacific

See the work.
Understand the choice.

Case study / The brief behind the frame.

15. Projects with a point

Why this sequence works.

Open with range

A property statement, immersive footage, then a graphic interruption. The first row introduces the work and the studio's point of view without repeating a layout.

Change the visual volume

Photographic frames, open white space, small editorial labels and dense red type take turns. There is no fixed color order to maintain.

Hypothetical post concepts. Project-specific dates, dimensions, claims and founder answers need approval before publication. The grid demonstrates rhythm; it is not a fixed publishing calendar.

Put people inside the system

Founder prompts and process posts sit between project pieces. They explain judgment, not just personality.

Keep each post independent

Every tile has its own readable message. Nothing relies on a puzzle grid or a neighbouring post to make sense.