Production brief

One large project title, then teaser and photography scope. Prices align with their services. The logo signs the page without becoming its headline.

Why these are useful tests. A brand that only works on a cinematic photograph is incomplete. The quotation has to make technical scope, price and responsibility clear. The layout changes; the underlying offer does not.

Spatial proposal

Separate current land capture from proposed interior visualisation. Each service has its own scope and price block, keeping technical detail readable.

Invoice extension & source checks.

The creator switches from quotation to invoice mode without sending anything or collecting payment. The invoice is a labelled mockup, not an issued bill. Client text is local to this browser session.
